LITTLE PICCOLA

Piccola lived in Italy with her mother in an old stone house. They were very poor, and the mother was away from home almost every day, working hard to earn money for her little girl and herself. Piccola had no toys except some stones and a very old doll. Christmas Eve came. Piccola's mother hurried home from her work; they had their little supper of soup and bread, and soon it was bedtime. Piccola remembered that she had to hang up her stocking, and she didn't have any. But then she decided to get one of her wooden shoes. She put it close to the chimney, and said to herself, "Surely Santa Claus will know what it's there for. He will know I haven't got any stockings, so I gave him the shoe instead."

Next morning Piccola woke up and ran to the chimney. The wooden shoe was on its place, but there was a little swallow inside. Piccola kissed her mother, and kissed the bird, and kissed the shoe, she was so happy. When they took the bird out of the shoe, they found that it could not fly, and they saw that one of its wings was hurt a little. But the mother bound it up carefully. Piccola was a proud little girl when she took her Christmas present to show her friends. They had a lot of gifts, dolls that could say "mamma", bright picture books, trains of cars, toy pianos; but none of their toys was alive. And there was not a happier little girl in the whole country of Italy.
