Reading. Read the text and answer the questions.

My name is Jack. I am twelve. I live with my parents in Africa. My parents are scientists. They know a lot about African animals. We get on well and spend a lot of time together. I have got an elder sister. Her name is Jill. She is twenty-three. Jill doesn't live with us. She lives with her husband, Bill. I don't like Bill. If Jill wants something, Bill always does it. Sometimes these are very silly or bad things.

One day I visit my sister and her husband. We are having coffee when suddenly she says, 'Bill, I want to have a pet giraffe.' Bill's eyes get very big. 'Yes, a pet giraffe,' repeats my sister, 'it can live in the hall. Our hall is very big.' Bill's eyes get normal and he says, 'OK, dear, I think I can get you a giraffe.' 'Where do you want to get it?' I ask him. 'In the grasslands, of course,' he answers. 'You mustn't do that!' I cry. 'You can have serious problems with the police!' 'Why? I can find a stray cat or a stray dog in the street. Why can't I find a stray giraffe?' I look at Bill. 'I think you can't hide a giraffe in the house,' I say. I stand up, say goodbye to them and walk to the door.

This night I can't sleep. I am thinking about my bad sister and silly Bill. I am thinking about that poor giraffe, too. Giraffes must live in the grasslands. They are tall, big and strong, and they must walk free! They must have a lot of trees around. They love eating fresh leaves. And if people want to look at them, they can watch a film or go on a safari. It is wrong to catch giraffes and put them in cages or houses.
